

Proactive extended warranty for your single-phase solution

Uptime and availability are critical regardless of industry or application. The weakest link in your critical equipment is the batteries. All batteries age and fail over time. Be proactive when shopping for your new UPS and attach a three-year proactive extended warranty with it, ensuring your equipment is available in the event of an outage.

Proactive extended warranties not only cover the repair or replacement of your UPS and batteries in the event of a failure, but also provide a one-time proactive battery replacement at year three, securing your uptime and investment. Purchasing a proactive extended warranty with your product ensures your critical systems' availability, but also provides cost saving over time, and guarantees no out-of-pocket expenses during the first six years of ownership!

What comes with a proactive extended warranty?

- Three years of extended coverage beyond the factory warranty
- One proactive battery replacement at year three
- Remedial repair/replacement in the event of failure
- A total of six years' coverage including the three-year factory warranty
- Cost savings over time, no additional out-of-pocket expenses incurred

Why should you invest?

Purchasing an extended warranty is a smart way to save money. Over time, all batteries fail; this provides you coverage for automatic replacement and no additional expenses during the agreement year.

On average, purchasing an extended warranty up front is less expensive than purchasing a replacement battery upon failure. Additionally, batteries ship next business day if you have a proactive extended warranty.

Proactive extended warranties take the guesswork out of failures and provide peace of mind knowing a replacement battery will automatically be sent to you at year three.
